Mushriqui Consulting, now doing business as Tego Texi Tectum through its security and military division, provides proprietary integrated solutions of Protective Equipment & Mobile Security for civilian and military clients. Truly an internationally-focused company, Tego Texi Tectum has a sales team that covers all six continents. According to General Counsel Jeana Mushriqui, such a diverse sales team has been a great asset to the company, allowing employees to understand clients regardless of differing languages or needs, and to relay those needs to the R&D and supply chain teams.

Tego Texi Tectum is headquartered in the outskirts of Philadelphia, and has been exporting for more than five years. The company does business with a strong network of partners throughout Europe, South America, and the Middle East. Beyond its success in the international markets, Tego Texi Tectum also boasts the highest ethical standards in raw material sourcing, manufacturing, quality control, prompt delivery, maintenance, and after-sales follow up.

General Counsel Mushriqui emphasizes the impact that reducing the number of foreign trade barriers would have on Tego Texi Tectum, saying,

“ Besides the obvious fact that reducing the number of foreign trade barriers would undoubtedly increase our base of raw material sourcing, manufacturing, and even after-sales follow up; we believe that eliminating foreign trade barriers will revive the U.S. economy through increased participation of small and medium sized businesses and increased international sales for U.S. companies through reciprocity. ”
